

Base Components of an Abatement Plan

A successful abatement plan will have multiple elements; programs to treat individuals with OUD, programs to reduce harms from opioid use, programs to prevent future opioid misuse, and coordination and monitoring of those efforts. A combination of efforts across all four buckets will be required to effectively abate the opioid epidemic.

These are representative best practices and policies that will be modeled and considered in our simulation model.

“We have an opportunity, generationally, to make a difference in our state. And, I truly believe it is a result of the leadership in this community - Mobile is going to lead the charge for how this can be done effectively.”

ATTORNEY GENERAL STEVE MARSHALL

“Helios brings the expertise that will help us identify the highest and best use of these dollars while also supporting the excellent work many local non-profits are already doing.”

MAYOR SANDY STIMPSON

“I’ve not seen anything like it for a city. And, being able to collaborate with outside entities that couple together information and modeling, and actually looking at that information in a systemic way and then moving forward based on that information - its very exciting.”

RICARDO WOODS, CITY ATTORNEY,
MOBILE, AL
